WORLD WATER DAY
22nd March 2017

World Water Day is celebrated every year on 22nd of March by the people all across the world. The day was established to be celebrated as an annual event in the year 1993 by the decision of the United Nations General Assembly. This campaign was declared as a World Day for Water to be celebrated on the 22nd of March each year to increase the awareness among the people about the importance, need and conservation of water.

To increase the awareness of students towards the importance of water in various fields of life including the environment and to acquire environmentally friendly techniques to reduce water pollution, Dr. Anandbabu. R., Assistant professor (Environmental Science) Department of Community Medicine organized Poster presentation for Under Graduate students on Wednesday, March 22nd.

Enthusiastic participation in the event showcased the creative streak & commitment of the Staff and the Students towards the cause of creating awareness on the conservation of water.

Our college students prepared posters as part of the activity marking The World Water Day, which has been held on March 22, 2017.
